PRESS RELEASE

Emblems in the Workplace

The acceptability in the workplace of various personal emblems, badges or branded clothes, still causes concern in some workplaces. The Equality Commission has published guidance which distinguishes between different kinds of symbols or emblems.

The Commission does not make rulings on what is an acceptable display but we do provide advice to anyone seeking it and our guidance is available on our website:

Chief Commissioner Bob Collins' 'View from the Chair' column, as published in the News Letter, discusses the issue of emblems in the workplace.
